

Technical Architecture:

Architecture of the Job Portal

Information Providers who publish open positions and company background information in the format using controlled vocabularies. They have two different approaches for publishing annotated job postings depending on their existing software infrastructure. If they use database standard software in the back-end, they can export related data directly into RDF using mapping tools like . If they do not use any enterprise software.

regulators and consumers.

